Subject: Letter in response to 3/18 op-ed "KSM's Dispensable Trial"

Dear Mike:

Please considering publishing the letter to the editor below as a counter to the March 18, 2010, op-ed KSM's Dispensable Trial by Benjamin Wittes and Jack L. Goldsmith.

Attorney David Cynamon, who represents the Kuwaiti detainees at Guantanamo Bay, argues in his letter that Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and the other alleged Sept. 11 conspirators deserve due process. "No matter how distasteful or difficult, we uphold this principle for suspected mass murderers, war criminals and even those we believe to be terrorists, so that the rights of all law-abiding citizens are protected," Cynamon writes.

Thank you in advance for your consideration. Should you have any questions, you may reach me at 202-973-1321. Mr. Cynamon's contact information may be found below his letter.

Best,

Andrew Koneschusky

Dear Editor:

The recommendation of Benjamin Wittes and Jack L. Goldsmith (KSM's Dispensable Trial, March 18) that Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and the other alleged Sept. 11 conspirators should be held indefinitely without due legal process sounds like a simple and appealing solution to a thorny problem. But such simplistic thinking corrodes a core principle on which our nation is based.

Applying the logic of Wittes and Goldsmith – that the political and public relations costs of trying terror suspects outweigh their Constitutional rights – can easily lead us to abandon due process for other unpopular individuals whose trials are expensive, messy or theatrical. Our legal foundation rests on the idea that all suspected lawbreakers are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law. No matter how distasteful or difficult, we uphold this principle for suspected mass murderers, war criminals and even those we believe to be terrorists, so that the rights of all law-abiding citizens are protected.

Following the argument of Wittes and Goldsmith, the remaining detainees in Guantanamo should never be released because we assume most are guilty and because granting them their right to trials will be legally and politically disruptive. In fact, no matter what our own political or personal beliefs, we owe these prisoners legal due process so their guilt or innocence can be determined fairly. In a country that presumes innocence, it is categorically unjust to imprison so many who are probably innocent to punish so few who may be guilty.

Jailing people indefinitely without trial is what dictators do; not democracies.

Sincerely,
David Cynamon
